Contents

Foreword
Mireille Hildebrandt and Jeanne Gaakeer

0 Prefatory remarks on Human Law and Computer Law
Mireille Hildebrandt

0.1 Comparative law
0.2 Computer law?
0.3 Comparing human law and computer law
0.4 Human language and computer language: law, code and literature

PART I − LAW AND CODE

1 Prefatory remarks to part I: law and code
Mireille Hildebrandt

1.1 Law and language
1.2 Language and computer code
1.3 Law as Code: two strands of research
   1.3.1 Artificial Intelligence and Legal Subjectivity
   1.3.2 Legal and technological normativity

2 From Galatea 2.2 to Watson – and back?
Mireille Hildebrandt

2.1 Introduction
   2.1.1 Mythical beginnings
   2.1.2 Beyond Snow’s Two Cultures
2.2 Eliza and the Turing test: a human machine?
2.3 IBM’s heroes: Deep Blue and Watson
   2.3.1 Deep Blue
   2.3.2 Watson
2.4 Searle’s Chinese room argument: syntax and meaning
2.5 Back to ‘my fair lady’
2.6 The legal status of smart contraptions: tools, rivals or companions?
   2.6.1 Embodiment, emotion and cognition
   2.6.2 Legal implications of smart agents
      2.6.2.1 Artificial legal subjects: the agency of corporations
      2.6.2.2 Artificial legal subjects: the agency of other ‘intelligent machines’
2.7 Concluding remarks
3 What robots want: autonomous machines, codes and new frontiers of legal responsibility
Ugo Pagallo

3.1 Introduction
3.2 The no new responsibility thesis
3.3 The new weak responsibility thesis
  3.3.1 New crimes, new punishments
  3.3.2 New agents, new contracts
3.4 The new strong responsibility thesis
3.5 Conclusion

4 Abort, retry, fail: scoping techno-regulation and other techno-effects
Bibi van den Berg and Ronald Leenes

4.1 Introduction
4.2 What is techno-regulation?
4.3 The limits of the debate on techno-regulation
4.4 Beyond the limits of techno-regulation, part 1: persuasion, nudging and affordances
4.5 Beyond the limits of techno-regulation, part 2: unintentional and implicit influences of technology
4.6 The full scope of techno-effects
4.7 Abort, retry, fail. Or: liberating the boxed-in concept of techno-regulation

5 A bump in the road. Ruling out law from technology
Katja de Vries and Niels van Dijk

5.1 Introduction
5.2 Law is dead, long live techno-regulation?
5.3 Incorporeal rules or brute matter? Two inescapable truisms
5.4 The practice of law and the price of the practice turn
5.5 The medium of law
5.6 Hart – The Concept of Law
  5.6.1 A Practice Theory of Rules
  5.6.2 Demarcating law as a practice: law as a system of rules
5.7 Latour – the passage of law
  5.7.1 How to study law as a practice? An ethnography of the Council of State
  5.7.2 Demarcating law as a practice: law as a regime of reattachment
    5.7.2.1 The transfer of value objects
    5.7.2.2 Acts of attachment
    5.7.2.3 Clef de lecture
5.8 Beyond incorporeal rules and material media?
  5.8.1 Institution – regime of enunciation
  5.8.2 The legal trajectory of enunciation
5.9 Law and technology
5.9.1  A bump in the road
5.9.2  Law as tracing through reattachments
5.9.3  Technology as delegational folding
5.9.4  Law versus technology
5.10  Techno-regulation: a future without law?
   5.10.1  Techno-regulation: a legal understanding of technology
   5.10.2  A technological future without law?

PART II – LAW AND LITERATURE

6 Prefatory remarks to part II: law and literature
   Jeanne Gaakeer
   6.1 Man and/or machine?
   6.2 Law, literature and technology
   6.3 Constraints and options: technology – language – law

7 Control, Alt and/or Delete? Some observations on new technologies and the human
   Jeanne Gaakeer
   7.1 Introduction
   7.2 New kids on the law block?
   7.3 Narrative knowledge
   7.4 Control, Alt and/or Delete?
   7.5 O brave new world that has such people in’t?

8 Law, normativity and the writing. Oracle Night and Human indeterminacy
   Massimo Durante
   8.1 The semanticization of Being
   8.2 Legal and technological normativity
   8.3 Constraining affordances
   8.4 The meta-semanticization of narratives
   8.5 Narration as ‘mise en abîme’: Paul Auster’s Oracle Night
   8.6 Data tokens and the ‘digital habitat’
   8.7 Conclusion

9 When a robot can love - Blade Runner as a cautionary tale on law and technology
   Shulamit Almog
   9.1 Introduction
9.2  Blade Runner: the story
9.3  And personhood to all
9.4  Replicants: the construction of the non-human 9.5  Law as an invisible maker
9.6  Conclusion: what does it mean if a robot can genuinely love?